

Introducing the exquisite flavors of PGI Wines of Attica - the finest wines from the heart of Greece!

The Protected Geographical Indication (PGI) wines of Attica are a testament to Greece's rich winemaking traditions and the region's unique terroir. From the PGI Attiki (ΠΓΕ Αττική) to the PGI Retsina of Attiki (ΠΓΕ Ρετσίνα Αττικής), PGI Slopes of Kithaironas (ΠΓΕ Πλαγιές Κιθαιρώνα), and PGI Markopoulo (ΠΓΕ Μαρκόπουλο), Attica offers a range of high-quality wines that are celebrated around the world.

The PGI Attiki wines are a must-try for wine enthusiasts looking to experience the unique flavors of Attica. The region's warm Mediterranean climate and chalky soil produce grapes with a rich and complex flavor profile. The white wines of Attiki, made among others from Savatiano, and Roditis grapes, are characterized by their fruity notes and delicate floral aromas. These wines are perfect for pairing with light dishes, seafood, and fresh salads.

The red wines of Attiki are made among others from Agiorgitiko and Cabernet Sauvignon grapes, both of which thrive in the region's warm climate and chalky soil. These wines are full-bodied and rich, with a smooth finish that pairs well with hearty meat dishes, cheese platters, and savory snacks.

The PGI Retsina of Attiki is a truly unique wine that has been infused with the resin of the Aleppo pine tree for over 2000 years. This infusion adds a distinct flavor and aroma to the wine, making it refreshing and crisp. PGI Retsina of Attiki is perfect for pairing with Mediterranean cuisine, grilled meats, and seafood. This wine has gained popularity around the world in recent years, as more and more wine enthusiasts embrace its unique flavor and character.

The PGI Slopes of Kithaironas offer a range of high-quality wines that reflect the region's unique terroir. The slopes of Kithaironas are known for their rocky soil, which provides excellent drainage for the grapevines. This results in grapes with a concentrated flavor and aroma, making the wines of Kithaironas truly unique.

The PGI Markopoulo wines are also a must-try for wine enthusiasts looking to experience the unique flavors of Attica. The region's mild climate and fertile soil produce grapes with a rich and complex flavor profile. The white wines of Markopoulo, made from the Savatiano grape up to 80%, are characterized by their citrusy notes and crisp finish.

In conclusion, the PGI wines of Attica offer a range of unique and high-quality wines that reflect the region's rich winemaking traditions and unique terroir. Whether you're looking to try the crisp and refreshing PGI Retsina of Attiki or the full-bodied red wines of PGI Attiki, Attica has something for everyone. These wines are a celebration of Greece's natural resources and enduring winemaking traditions, and a must-try for any wine enthusiast looking to experience the unique flavors of Greece.
